WESTERLY

The banks and saloons were closed in Westerly election day, but all other business went forward as usual. There was considerable activity in and around the town hall, the selected voting place of the First and Second districts, the line of the districts being laid out so as to include the town hall, for the accommodation of all voters. The main questions at issue, so far as the great majority of the voters went, was not party principles, as nearly all the voting population of Westerly is classed as republicans, and democrats can only be elected through republican treachery. The main issues were to defeat Maurice W. Flynn for state senator, the regular republican nominee, who was fairly nominated by the largest republican caucus ever held in the town, and to place the town in the no-license column. The republicans who were outroting place of the First and Second umn. The republicans who were out-and-out against Flynn, were the same who worked all day, or during the vot-ing period, to get out the no-license ordinarily, a republican nomination is equal to election in Westerly, and if there is a fight that fight is at the caucus and not at the poils as all republicans were supposed to stand by the regular nominee of the party. The opposition to Mr. Flynn was continued after the caucus, and the caucus holters were out to get republican votes for Tristain D. Babcock, the democratic nominee for state senator. As es for ITISIAM D. Bacceck, the demo-cratic nomlines for state senator. As a natural result both sides worked hard to win, while the democrats sim-ply voted and went away smiling, while the factions of republicans fought on. The purpose to defeat Figure and win no license was the scall and the anti-

The purpose to defeat Figure and win no-license was the goal and the antiFigure men worked hard to achieve that end. Figure and his friends were not idle. The polls opened at 9 a. m. and closed at 5 p. m.

The election officials, and party workers at the polls were:

First district: Ira B. Crandall, mederator; John J. Dunn, cirk; George uthati, Antonia Tosca, republican supervisors: George H. Hodgson, Frank Hooth, democratic supervisors; Fatrick H. Morrison, gate tender; Loren McLaren, Joseph Gervasini, Charles D. Maxson, i'red E. Boyington, checkers.
